The Nominees

The Hon. John S. Barbour, who is to succeed Mr. Riddleberger in the United States Senate on March 4, 1889, was born in Culpeper county December 29, 1820, and comes of a family that has for State's history. After an excellent preparation at the best schools of that day he entered the University of Virginia, where he graduated and was qualified for the profession of law, the practice of which he began in his native county.

In 1847 the people of Culpeper sent him to the Legislature, and he served them for four consecutive sessions. In 1852 he was elected president of the railroad company then known as the tion he remained until it was merged nto what is now designated the Virginia from Alexandria to Danville, altogether manufacturers of all latest styles of FANCY EISCUITS, CAKES, and CRACKERS. nated by the Mahone party and the Democratic prospects being exceedingly dismal, the State convention met at crate Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument Lynchburg and the votes of the delegates called Mr. Barbour to the chairmanship of the State committee. He sceepted, proceeded to reorganize the party, and led it in a campaign of unexampled vigor. Success crowned him and his associates with victory, and the Democratic party, then returning to power, has ever since been able to maintain itself against Mahone and the Republicans. From that day to this Mr. Barbour has been at the head of the Democratic Committee, excepting only the campaign of 1886, when he was absent in Europe.
